

JACKSON INSISTS ORIENTAL BANK CAN'T LIQUIDATE

Appellate Division Is Told
It Cannot Dismiss Receivers.

STOVER DENIES ASSETS.

Attorney-General's Representatives Questions Value of Stated Security.

Attorney-General Jackson's appeal from the order of Justice O'Hanlon, of the Supreme Court, vacating the order appointing receivers for the Oriental Bank was argued in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court this afternoon. Ex-Judge Martin L. Stover appeared for the Attorney-General and opened the argument. Charles K. Beckman appeared for the bank and David McKere for the depositors.

Many depositors of the bank were in court among them several women.

Attorney Stover said that the action in dismissing the order appointing temporary receivers practically destroys the action of the Attorney-General so far as the appointment of the receivers and the bank doing business are concerned. He reviewed the case and said: "Here we have the situation of a banking institution wholly insolvent which, by vote of directors, called upon the Banking Department to take charge of its assets, and yet comes here today and asks for permission to take charge of its own affairs. It is not within the power of the Metropolitan Trust Company to enter into a contract like that proposed with the Oriental Bank, a defunct institution."

Justice Scott asked if it was understood that the bank was insolvent. Mr. Stover said it was. Justice Scott then remarked that the Bank Examiner, a State official, says the Oriental Bank is solvent, to which Mr. Stover replied:

"Upon the face of the assets it may appear so, but who knows whether the assets are good or not?"

Justice McKim said that if the bank was insolvent there could be no appeal from the order appointing receivers. The question was, has the bank's capital been impaired, Mr. Stover replied that it was.

Justice Scott asked if it was not within the discretion of the Court to dismiss the receivers and permit an agreement to be carried out which acceeded to be for the best interests of depositors and creditors. Mr. Stover replied: "No, the statute imperatively prohibits it. A bank cannot go on if it is insolvent."

The lawyers and spectators smiled. Mr. Beckman argued on behalf of the Oriental Bank, as well as the Metropolitan Trust Company. He gave a short history of the case, citing the facts and said:

"By the terms of the agreement made between the bank and the trust company, we contract for the best interests of all parties concerned would be best protected. The Attorney-General did not ask for the appointment of receivers for nearly a month after the bank had closed its doors."

"About 50 per cent. of assets have been obtained. We secured the approval of the State Superintendent of Banks to our plan and within an hour we sought to get into communication with the Attorney-General. That official said he would see us the next day, but for three days we were unable to see him. In the meantime we wrote two letters to him. Then he went into court and asked for the appointment of receivers."

Mr. Beckman said that the bank did not intend to continue business, although he would not say that the bank would liquidate.

HOODOO THIRTEEN FOLLOWED VESSEL.

That Number in Crew of Bark
Wrecked a Month Ago, Arrive
Here To-Day.

The arrival at this port on Friday, March 13, of thirteen shipwrecked seamen, whose vessel was lost on Feb. 12, completed a chapter of disaster in which the baleful influence of the number thirteen was felt.

The seamen composed the crew of the British bark Birnam Wood, which was wrecked on a reef off Santa Cruz, Cuba, on Feb. 12. The crew were taken on the bark and the vessel was eventually hauled from the reef and towed to Santa Cruz.

The shipwrecked men arrived on the Yumuri to-day.
